

University	Aid
Amherst College	Link Amherst College is "need blind" with respect to admission. Amherst will not take into account whether or not you have applied for financial aid in the admission process. The College has a comprehensive program of financial aid that provides assistance in the form of scholarships and grants, loans, and student employment; Amherst meets the full demonstrated financial need of all admitted applicants.
Bates College	Link Bates meets 100% of demonstrated financial need for all admitted students, regardless of citizenship status. Your financial aid package will consist of scholarship grants and on-campus employment. Bates' financial aid packages for non-U.S. citizens students do not include loans.
Barnard College	Link Barnard has limited funding for International first-year applicants and Fall domestic transfer applicants and students admitted off of the waiting list. Therefore, Barnard is need-aware and does consider financial need as a factor when reviewing these applications.
Berea College	Link No tuition promise There are three main categories of Financial Assistance: grants/scholarships that do not have to be repaid, loans that must be repaid, and earnings from work. Below is a list of common awards you may receive at Berea College.
Brandeis University	Link Brandeis is recognized for its competitive program of scholarship and financial aid for international students. We require all international students seeking financial aid to complete the CSS/Financial Aid PROFILE by the stated priority filing dates. The PROFILE application can be completed and submitted online.

	The amount of financial aid received each year will be dependent on the family's financial circumstances. While competition for international student financial aid is strong, it is also the case that the University is committed to maintaining and expanding its global campus community.
Brown University	Link International students are eligible to apply for University financial aid. We meet full demonstrated need for students who are admitted provided they apply for financial aid at the time they apply for admission. International students who do not apply for and receive financial aid upon admission to Brown are not eligible for institutional aid in subsequent years, even if a student's financial circumstances change or a sponsor discontinues providing support. Brown will be need-blind for international students beginning with the Class of 2029.
Bryn Mawr College	Link Bryn Mawr College awards need-based financial aid to international students which includes grants, loans, and campus employment. The College will meet full demonstrated need for all admitted students. Bryn Mawr College is need-sensitive with respect to admission. Once admissibility is determined, funds are distributed until the financial aid budget has been exhausted. If there are places remaining to be filled in the class, a student's eligibility for aid may be taken into account.
Bucknell University	Link We do have some scholarships for international students. These scholarships, however, are limited and competitive.
Carleton College	Link Kellogg Scholarship Program The Kellogg Scholarship is long-standing at Carleton; it provides assistance to non-U.S. citizens who are not permanent residents toward their expenses at Carleton. George Scholarship Program

	The George Scholarships are for students from developing nations who demonstrate financial need and exceptional academic potential and promise. To apply for George and Kellogg scholarships students need only to complete the application for admission and request consideration for financial aid.
Claremont Mckenna College	Link CMC is "need-aware" for international students, which means CMC takes into account a student's ability to pay the full cost of attendance for four years as a part of admission criteria for applicants who are not U.S. citizens or U.S. Permanent Residents. CMC has limited need-based financial resources for international students. Any student that needs financial assistance to cover the full cost of attendance must indicate that they are applying for need-based financial aid on their admission application,
Clark University	Link If you are an international student applying to your first year of undergraduate study at Clark University, you could be eligible for merit scholarships offered by the University. On average, international students at Clark pay $40,000 per year.
Colgate University	Link Colgate is need-aware in the application process for all students, both domestic and international. Our most competitive applicants will be admitted to Colgate regardless of whether or not they applied for financial aid. Colgate offers need-based financial aid, meeting 100% of every admitted student's demonstrated need.
College of Wooster	Link Wooster is particularly fortunate to have incredibly successful and loyal alumni who donate generously, allowing us to provide surprisingly large aid awards. This year, for example, more than 85% of our students received some assistance. Over $50 million of this aid takes the form of merit scholarships and need-based grants that are offered to students without any repayment obligation.

Columbia University	Link A Columbia education is possible for students from all socioeconomic backgrounds, including international students. Columbia is committed to meeting 100% of the demonstrated need of all admitted first-year students, regardless of citizenship. International students apply for and receive a substantial amount of financial aid every year, with international financial aid totaling over $17 million for the Class of 2025.
Cornell University	Link Cornell University practises “need-aware” international admissions and provides financial aid to admitted students and undocumented students who apply for financial aid and have demonstrated financial need. International applicants who indicate on their applications that they will not be applying for financial aid (and who are admitted) will not be eligible to apply for financial aid at any time as an undergraduate at Cornell.
Dartmouth College	Link Dartmouth College has scholarships and loans available to international students, which includes an allowance for travel to the U.S. We understand that your circumstances may be unique and our office will help in any way we can. Dartmouth has expanded its longstanding need-blind admissions policy to include all international citizens, beginning with the Class of 2026.
Davidson College	Link The Alvarez Scholars Program provides need-based scholarships to outstanding international students from all over the world. While Davidson's admission process is not need-blind for international students, 100 percent of your calculated financial need is met through the Davidson Trust.
Emory University	Link

	Emory University's Office of Undergraduate Admission offers merit-based scholarships to a limited number of international students each year. All citizens of foreign countries who are not permanent residents of the United States (living in the US or abroad) will be considered for these opportunities.
Franklin & Marshall College	Link Franklin & Marshall will meet 100% of the student's calculated need for all four years based upon their family contribution and the information provided prior to admission. The amount of aid is generous, but also limited. If a student requires a high level of aid, the admission process becomes more competitive.
Gettysburg College	Link Gettysburg College embraces diversity and has a strong commitment to our international students. We strive to meet the demonstrated financial need for all admitted international students; however, the financial aid process is highly competitive and funds are limited.
Grinnell College	Link We value you for you, not how much your family can contribute to the cost of your education. So when you apply for admission, we don't consider your ability to pay — that's what we call need-blind admission*. We also meet 100% of your demonstrated need without loans — only a handful of colleges and universities among more than 4,000 in the United States can say that.
Hamilton College	Link Hamilton's generous financial aid commitment includes a promise to meet the full-demonstrated need of its students for all four years. This policy includes international students who applied for aid and demonstrated financial need at the time of admission. Most of our need-based financial aid awards consist of a Hamilton College scholarship and campus employment, and the budget we use to build awards includes both direct (billable) costs and indirect expenses such as books and travel.

	Although Hamilton has one of the most generous international financial aid programs in the U.S., the College is not need-blind in admission for non U.S. citizens. This means that a family's ability to pay may be a factor in the admission decision for international candidates and, therefore, it is in applicants' best interest to be honest about the amount their family is able to contribute to a Hamilton education.
Harvard University	Link Harvard does not offer any merit-based aid and no full-ride scholarships. However, they do meet 100% of students' demonstrated financial needs. Almost half of the batch at Harvard University avails need-based scholarships or financial aid every year.
Lafayette College	Link Lafayette is one of 70 schools in the nation that guarantees to meet 100% of admitted and enrolled students' demonstrated financial need. For this purpose, demonstrated financial need is a calculated dollar amount based on information the international student provides on the CSS Profile.
Lehigh University	Link "Lehigh University provides need-based financial assistance to a limited number of admitted non-US citizens who have applied for financial aid and who have demonstrated financial need. It is our goal to meet 100% of the demonstrated need (not including travel and personal expenses) for as many admitted students as possible with the limited funds available."
Macalester College	Link Macalester is one of few colleges that is committed to providing a financial aid package that meets 100% of every admitted student's demonstrated need for financial aid AND offers a robust merit-based scholarship program.
Massachusetts Institute of Technology	Link MIT is among the seven universities in the USA offering need-blind admissions and full-need aid. If the students are admitted, they will be provided with a student aid package (financial aid) that gives one hundred percent of their demonstrated financial need.

Minerva Schools	Link "If you are admitted and demonstrate financial need, we will offer you an aid package — no matter who you are or what country you are from."
Mt. Holyoke College	Link Need-based financial assistance is awarded to admitted international applicants (non-US citizens) based on their financial eligibility as determined through review of the CSS Profile. Applicants must apply for financial aid at the same time they apply for admission. Need based aid is awarded for four years, so candidates anticipating financial need at any time during their Mount Holyoke career must apply for aid as a prospective student. After a student has been admitted, it is too late to initiate an application for aid.
Northwestern University	Need-based financial aid is available to international students seeking undergraduate degrees at Northwestern. We guarantee to meet 100% of all admitted first-year students' demonstrated financial need for all four years. We are need-aware for international students, meaning that a request for financial aid consideration and the amount of financial aid you require may factor into your admission decision.
Occidental College	Link We offer merit-based scholarships to many international students each year, but we typically only offer need-based financial aid to two international applicants each year.
Oberlin College	Link As a need-aware institution, Oberlin considers a student's financial circumstances when making admissions decisions. Applying for need-based financial aid places you in Oberlin's most competitive applicant pool. For students enrolling in the Fall of 2022, the admit rate for all international students was approximately 8%. Applicants who can contribute at least $35,000 USD per year towards

	their educational expenses are the most competitive for admission.
Pitzer College	Link Pitzer College has limited financial aid that can be offered to a small number of international students. However, if admitted, Pitzer will meet 100% of your demonstrated need with institutional work-study and a Pitzer need-based scholarship.
Pomona College	Link Pomona does not provide merit or athletic scholarships but is committed to a fully need-based financial aid program. Forty-four per cent of our international students qualify for and receive need-based aid, with the average amount of aid nearly $66,000/year. Admissions is need-aware for international applicants, but we meet the full need of every admitted international student.
Princeton University	Link The scholarships from Princeton University are available for both international as well as domestic students in the form of assistantships, financial aid, external loans, and fellowships. Keep in mind that the scholarships will only be need-based.
Reed College	Link All financial aid at Reed is granted on the basis of demonstrated financial need. Reed offers no academic or athletic scholarships. Need is determined through an assessment of your family's financial resources and ability to contribute toward the cost of your education. Reed meets the full demonstrated need of all admitted students. Reed will not admit a student who demonstrates need without offering a financial aid award. All offers of financial assistance include grants, work opportunities, and loans.
Rice University	Link We admit students from all socioeconomic backgrounds and fund many students who might not otherwise be able to afford a Rice education. International students who receive need-based aid will have 100% of demonstrated need met with institutional grant aid, but are not eligible

	for the Rice Investment. Rice University offers need-based financial aid to a limited number of international undergraduate applicants entering in the fall semester. Rice University uses the CSS Profile for international students applying for aid.
Smith College	Link Smith College awards need-based aid to non-U.S. citizens, both first-year and September transfer applicants. The pool of international students is highly competitive and the level of support provided from the college ranges widely, depending on particular family circumstances. Aid is determined based on the information provided by the family on the Financial Aid Application, along with tax or income statements.
Stanford University	Link Stanford has a limited amount of financial aid for international students. International students needing assistance must make that indication on the admission application. Applicants who are admitted with eligibility for aid will be awarded assistance from institutional funds based on their family financial circumstances.
St John's College	Link International Applicants are eligible for both need-based financial aid and merit scholarships. You may apply using the Common Application, St. John's Online Application, or the Coalition Application.
St Mary's College Notre Dame	Need-Based Financial Assistance Saint Mary's College offers a limited amount of need-based aid to international students depending on your family's financial situation and level of need. Students will be reviewed for need-based scholarships at the time of their application or once they're admitted, based on the Certification of Finances form. Additional information may be requested as needed. Students who qualify for either an academic scholarship or need-based aid will be notified in their acceptance letter.
Swarthmore College	Link

	If you are applying as a first-year international student, need-based financial aid (also referred to as Swarthmore Scholarship grant) is available. Regardless of your citizenship, if Swarthmore admits you and you applied for financial aid, the College meets 100% of your institutionally determined financial need up to — and including — full annual tuition (with annual $750 book allowance), fees, room, board (meal plan), academic supplies, and personal expenses.
Trinity College	Link All international applicants are considered for general merit-based scholarships based on the materials submitted with their application for admission. Historically, scholarships have ranged from $5,000-$30,000 USD per year, renewable for 4 years (8 semesters).
Tufts University	Link Tufts proudly meets 100% of the demonstrated financial need of every admitted student, regardless of citizenship. Demonstrated need is the difference between the annual cost to attend Tufts (including books, personal expenses, and transportation to campus) and the amount a student's family is expected to contribute each year. Financial need is determined by our analysis of family financial resources via submitted paperwork. While competition for international student financial aid is extremely competitive, the university is committed to maintaining and expanding its global campus community.
Union College	Link Union College utilises the CSS Profile to determine financial need. The College is need-aware in the admissions process, which means that your financial information is considered along with the other components of your application during the admission evaluation. We typically expect international students, without outside financial support, to contribute a minimum of $7,500 per year towards their education. Applicants who can contribute more will be most competitive for admission. Last year, the average aid recipient contributed more than $25,000 (annual expectation), with over 75 percent of our international aid budget awarded in the two Early Decision

	rounds. Need-based awards ranged from $20,000 to just over $70,000, with an average of $51,000 towards the year's comprehensive fee of $82,845. Financial aid is limited and competitive, so it is important to adhere to established deadlines.
University of Chicago	Link UChicago offers fully financed financial aid to international students who stand up to the beginning procedures of the scholarship application. This UChicago scholarship is offered to needy students. This scholarship amount covers tuition fees, food, accommodation, and study materials.
University of Notre Dame	Link Although we have full scholarships, those are given to students who truly need the entire cost to attend Notre Dame and stand out across the board in our application process.
University of Pennsylvania	Link Penn commits to meeting full demonstrated need for four years or eight semesters for all admitted students. If your family's financial circumstances remain the same, financial aid remains similar; if circumstances change during the year (such as a parent losing a job or a sibling entering or leaving college), your financial aid package may be adjusted. Students must reapply for financial aid each academic year.
University of Rochester	Link Merit Scholarships. Merit Scholarships is a full tuition scholarship offered to international students. This is one of the most generous scholarships at the University of Rochester.
University of Richmond	Link The University of Richmond's policy is to fully meet the demonstrated need of its students who submit all required financial aid forms by the stated deadline. Students who demonstrate need but fail to meet the deadline will lose a percentage of their need-based grants/scholarships. Therefore, their need will not be fully met. We assess a

	10% reduction in need-based grant/scholarship aid for applications received up to two months after the deadline. Applications received more than two months late will not be considered for need-based aid.
University of Wisconsin - Madison	Link Selected scholars will receive a full-time, four-year/eight-semester scholarship to the University of Wisconsin–Madison that includes tuition and fees, on-campus room and board, health insurance, airfare, and a stipend for miscellaneous expenses. Through the generous gifts of the King and Morgridge families, this endowed program will provide up to six scholarships each year.
Vanderbilt University	Link Vanderbilt University offers need-based scholarships to a limited number of international undergraduate applicants. If you indicate on your application for admission that you are seeking need-based assistance, the admission decision will be made on a need-aware basis.
Vassar College	Link Vassar is not need-blind in the evaluation of international students. However, if admitted, Vassar meets 100% of the candidate's demonstrated financial need for all four years.
Washington and Lee	Link Washington and Lee University provides both need-based and merit-based assistance to international students in each entering class. Awards range from several thousand dollars to the full annual cost of attendance. Admission to Washington and Lee does not guarantee financial assistance.
Washington University in St. Louis	Link Danforth Scholars Program is a fully funded scholarship offered to international students. This is one of the most generous scholarships at Washington University in St. Louis.
Wellesley College	Link Financial assistance is available for a limited number of international citizens. Wellesley is committed to meeting

	100 percent of calculated need for all admitted international citizens who have applied for financial aid during the admission process. Its purpose is to support highly qualified candidates who could not otherwise attend Wellesley. Because of the keen competition for these funds, candidates should apply for them only if family resources cannot adequately meet College expenses. In determining the amount of aid given, the College examines the financial resources of the student and her family through information provided on financial aid forms. A well-formulated financial plan is required of all financial aid applicants.
Wesleyan University	Link Wesleyan and U.S. federally sponsored financial aid are available to U.S. citizens and permanent residents. Financial aid for non-U.S. citizens or permanent residents is limited and awarded based on both exceptional qualifications and demonstrated need. Each year, we expect to offer financial assistance to approximately 40-45 international students from a pool of approximately 2800 international applicants applying for financial aid. The full demonstrated financial need of all undergraduate students, as determined by the Financial Aid Office, is met with a combination of loans, part-time employment, and grants.
Williams College	Link For international students seeking financial assistance, Williams offers one of the most generous and comprehensive financial aid programs in the U.S. Although Williams isn't need-blind for international applicants, nearly 66 percent of international students receive financial aid from the college, with aid awards averaging $66,200 annually. Our financial aid includes free textbooks, lab and art supplies, music lessons, storage, and one round-trip plane ticket home each year.
Yale University	Link Yale operates a need-blind admissions policy for all applicants, regardless of citizenship or immigration status. Yale admits undergraduate students without regard to their ability to pay, and provides need-based financial aid awards to all admitted students on the basis of individual needs assessments. All of Yale's undergraduate financial aid is awarded on the basis of financial need. There are no merit-based or academic scholarships.
